

Letter of recommendation

To whom it may concern:

Based on several years of experience, we would like to write this letter of recommendation to our colleague Samuel Dostal.

He joined Resco company as a student of secondary school in March 2019. As a temporary employee he was responsible for development of web-based applications. His responsibility consisted of analysis and development of the features incorporated into our products. Samuel was involved in projects oriented toward continuous improvement of the company's product user experience. Even though, considering his age and real job experience, he might have been labeled as junior, he soon gained enough trust to be a core technical person to develop company's web based internal people finder.

Right from the start, he convinced the team leader with his creative approach and "can do" attitude. He is very appreciated team member as a result of great engagement, too. It is a must to underline his self-motivation for development and learning which he is capable of even when the learning curve is pretty steep.

We were also keen to help him in his school project and we co-financed his development, both hardware and software, of a rover vehicle with LIDAR sensors and surroundings mapping.

To sum up, Samuel is a great person to have in a team, both from technical and team behaving perspective. Without any exaggeration we can say that he has a great potential and we are eager to see how far can he make it.
